AFFIRMING OUR CORE CHURCH VALUES

Something to think about.....

Part of why we gather for worship and link up together in other ways in our church life is because it is so hard to love your neighbour. It is so hard, that we have to learn how to do it by practicing it week by week on each other so that we can get better at it! Here at church we are among others who are also taking seriously Jesus’ call to love God and neighbour. Here at church we get the opportunity to learn the art.

There are some people here who are masters at looking out for others, they are highly skilled at refraining from judging others, and they are virtuoso performers in the art of graciousness. It is a great joy to be in their company. For, while their learned goodness show us up, they are so lovely that they don’t look down at us, rather, they simply look for the best in us – and from them we learn to look for the best in others. It is hard out there! What would we do without this training?!

We are all learning the Christ-given fine art of loving others by not passing judgement, by forgiving sins, by refraining from gossip, and by looking for the best in people. We get to practice it on each other so that we can get better at it in our families and community networks. Because it is the way that Jesus is towards us, we are to rehearse it like concert pianists – practising the hard parts over and over until we get it right! Source: Unknown
